intro

The paper I'm looking at is Choice and personal responsibility: What is a morally relevant choice?, by Cappelen, Fest, Sørensen, and Tungodden (2018). The data and is available at Harvard Dataverse - FAIR - Centre for Experimental Research on Fairness, Inequality and Rationality.
